Towns should do more to support young people and give them things to do.
Phones are a huge part of teenagers' lives today.
Foreign languages are something schools have a lot of different feelings about, and there are many sides to it.
In my opinion, I believe that it would probably be a good idea for high schools to consider starting a little bit later than they currently do.

School start times affect students in a lot of different ways and should be looked at.
It seems to me that, in general, schools may want to think about maybe providing some kind of free breakfast option to students in the morning if possible.
Schools should change some rules about technology.
Math is a subject everyone takes in school.
